

A Minor. Philip Doddridge, 1755.

Ananias Davisson, 1820.

1. A - wake, our souls, and bless his name, Whose mercies nev - er fail; Who o - pens wide a door of hope In Ach - or's gloomy vale.
 2. En - ter, my soul with cheerful haste, For Je - sus is the door; Nor fear the serpent's wil - y arts, Nor fear the li - on's roar.

1. A - wake, our souls, and bless his name, Whose mercies nev - er fail; Who o - pens wide a door of hope In Ach - or's gloomy vale.
 2. En - ter, my soul with cheerful haste, For Je - sus is the door; Nor fear the serpent's wil - y arts, Nor fear the li - on's roar.

Be - hold the por - tal wide dis - play'd, The build - ings strong and fair With - in are pastures fresh and green, And liv - ing streams are there.
 O may thy grace the na - tions lead, And Jews and Gen - tiles come, All trav'ling in one nar - row path To one e - ter - nal home.

Be - hold the por - tal wide dis - play'd, The build - ings strong and fair With - in are pastures fresh and green, And liv - ing streams are there.
 O may thy grace the na - tions lead, And Jews and Gen - tiles come, All trav'ling in one nar - row path To one e - ter - nal home.

